

HE'S USING THE KIDS AGAINST YOU.

He is teaching them to hate you.
Not because the divorce is hard.
Because he wants you gone from their lives.

READ THIS TWICE

He has taken the children you grew inside your body and turned them into weapons pointed at your chest. You call. They don't answer. You drive to pick them up and they look at you like you are the threat. "Dad said you hit him." "Dad said you left us for someone else." "Dad said you're crazy." These are not their words. These are his. Planted. Repeated until they believe them.

At 2 a.m. you replay every visit, every text, every silence. You hunt for the exact moment you became the bad one. Stop. You did not lose them. He took them. One lie at a time. One weekend at a time. Until the child who used to run into your arms now calls you by your first name and says he is protecting himself from you.

This is not co-parenting. This is him finishing the job of destroying you by using the only people you would never fight back against. And every time you stay quiet trying to be the bigger person, he wins another piece of them.

THE TELL

How you know this is not 'kids being kids'

If you have ever had to write down what your child said after time with him because you knew no one would believe it came from them, that is not paranoia. That is you documenting abuse by proxy.

- Your child uses words they are too young to know: narcissist, toxic, abusive, gaslighting.
- They refuse gifts, cards, or calls and say 'Dad said we don't need anything from you.'
- They repeat exact phrases about court papers, money, or your past that only he could have said.
- They tell you they are 'protecting their peace' or 'setting boundaries' in his exact tone.
- Time with you drops after every visit with him. Contact only returns when he wants something.
- They accuse you of things that happened only in the version of the story he tells.
- They stop calling you Mom. They call you by your first name or 'my dad's ex.'

THE TELL

If your child has started sounding like your ex when they speak about you, he is not venting. He is speaking through them.

THE LIES HE PLANTS

The exact sentences mothers hear from their own children

These are not invented. These are the words real mothers hear after their children spend time with the father. Tick every one that has come out of your child's mouth.

- "Dad said you hit him and that's why we can't see you."
- "You don't love us. Dad said you left because you found someone else."
- "Dad said you're dangerous and we shouldn't be alone with you."
- "I don't want to come. Dad said you'll just make me sad."
- "Dad said you don't pay for anything and we have to live like this because of you."
- "Grandma said you were never a good mom anyway."
- "Dad said if I love you it means I don't love him."
- "You lied to the judge. Dad showed us the papers."
- "Dad said you only want us for the child support."
- "You abandoned us. Dad said you chose your new life."
- "Dad said we don't have to listen to you anymore."
- "Mommy is crazy. Dad said that's why we can't live with her."
- "Dad said you hit him with the car."
- "You never wanted us. Dad said that's why you left."

THE PATTERN

He does not need to be believed by you. He only needs to be believed by them. The more they repeat his words as their own, the more he has erased you.

SAY THIS

When they spit his poison at you

Soft words teach them the lies work. These are clear. Say them once. Stop explaining. The more you defend, the more they see you as the problem he said you are.

SAY THIS

When they say 'Dad said you don't love us': "I love you. Your father is lying to you to hurt me. I will not argue with you about the lies an adult put in your head. When you want the truth from me, not from him, I am here."

SAY THIS

When they refuse to come: "I will not force you while he is feeding you stories about me. I love you. The door stays open. Come when you are ready to hear my side instead of his."

SAY THIS

When they repeat a lie about money or court: "Those are things your father told you. They are not true. I will not discuss his lies with you. Ask me about something real."

SAY THIS

When he sends them with guilt messages: "Tell your father to text me himself. I do not take messages through my children."

SAY THIS

When they say they hate you: "I know that feels real right now. He has put a lot of work into making you feel it. I still love you. That does not change."

SAY THIS

When they stop calling you Mom: "I am your mother. Not his wife. Not the woman who came after me. I am the one who carried you. That does not go away because he told you it did."

BUILD THE RECORD

Make it impossible for him to lie about the lies

He counts on you being too emotional to document. Stop reacting on paper. Be boring. Be specific. Be relentless.

- Every time the kids repeat a lie, write the exact words, the date, what they said right before and after. No commentary. Just facts.
- Screenshot every message where he uses the kids as messengers or changes the schedule to punish you. Folder called 'Weaponization.'
- If he withholds time, send one calm message through the app: 'I am available for my court-ordered parenting time. Please confirm.' Screenshot his reply or lack of it.
- Tell one safe adult outside his circle. Get it in writing that they have witnessed the change in the kids.
- Keep a private list of every holiday, birthday, school event, and medical appointment he blocked or poisoned. Patterns matter in court.
- If they accuse you of something false, write the exact accusation and the date it came out of their mouth. Do not argue with the child. Document.

THE RULE

If it is not written down, it did not happen for the court. If your child said it after time with him, it goes in the record. No exceptions.

WHEN THEY REJECT YOU

The specific hell of your own child looking at you like the enemy

It is not just missing them. It is watching the child who once ran to you now turn their face away because he has made you the monster in their story. It is hearing your own child use the exact cold tone he uses when he wants to hurt you.

You will want to collapse after they leave. You will want to text him every ugly truth. Do not. That is exactly what he is waiting for. Every reaction gives him another story to tell them about how unstable you are.

- The child who just looked at you like you are dangerous is still the baby you stayed up with all night. He is trying to make you forget that person exists.
- Your job is not to make them love you again today. Your job is to stay the steady one they can return to when the lies stop working.
- He is betting they will never question him. Your refusal to disappear is the evidence they will eventually need.
- You are allowed to grieve the motherhood he stole. You are not allowed to let him steal the version of you that is still here.

PROTECT THE THREAD

Small, quiet moves that keep the real you alive in their memory

Big gestures give him ammunition. Small, consistent ones give them a different story of you that he cannot fully erase.

- One short, boring text a week through the parenting app only. No emotion. 'Thinking of you. Love you.' Screenshot it. He can show them or not.
- Leave one small thing they actually like at the exchange. No note. No card that can be twisted or thrown away in front of them.
- When you do have time, do not spend every minute defending yourself. Make one normal memory. Breakfast. A drive. A dumb joke. He cannot rewrite that as easily.
- Keep every drawing, photo, and card they ever gave you. When they are older and the fog lifts, those will matter more than his stories.
- If they are old enough, one calm letter they can read later: 'I know things feel confusing right now. I am still here. I love you. No matter what he tells you.'

THE RULE

Every time you refuse to turn a visit into a courtroom, you give them one more reason to doubt the story he is selling about you.

THE LONG GAME

Why it feels hopeless and why you keep showing up anyway

He is counting on you giving up. On the silence and the rejection eventually breaking you so you stop fighting for time. That is when he has won for good.

The children he is turning against you are still children. One day the lies will have to compete with their own memories and the record you kept. Your only job is to still be standing when that day comes.

You are not crazy. You are not a bad mother. You are a mother whose ex decided the children were the most effective way to keep destroying you. That is on him. Your job is to refuse to disappear.

TONIGHT

Write down the three worst lies your children have repeated in the last month. Date them. Save them. That is one more piece of the truth they will need when they start asking questions.

If this is escalating to false allegations, withheld time, or you fear for the children, get a lawyer who understands parental alienation patterns immediately. Document everything. In the U.S., call the National Domestic Violence Hotline at 1-800-799-7233 or text START to 88788. This is not legal advice.

He is betting they will never question him.

Every lie he plants is a bet against your persistence. You are the one who keeps showing up with clean records, calm boundaries, and the truth they can return to. The woman he tried to erase from their story is still here. And the children will eventually need the version of you he could not destroy.

You are not the enemy they were taught. You are the mother who refused to vanish.