

HE'S USING THE KIDS AGAINST YOU.

He is teaching them to hate you.
Not 'the divorce is confusing them.'
He is feeding them lies so they refuse you.

READ THIS TWICE

He has taken the children you carried in your body and turned them into weapons aimed at your chest. You call. They don't answer. You show up and they look at you like you're the threat. 'Dad said you hit him.' 'Dad said you left us for someone else.' 'Dad said you're crazy.' These are not their words. These are his. Planted. Repeated. Believed.

At 2 a.m. you replay every visit, every message, every silence, hunting for the exact thing you said that made them turn. Stop. You did not do this. He did. He is using your own kids to erase you from their lives while the courts call it 'high conflict' and tell you to co-parent better. This is not them picking a side. This is him making you the enemy so they stay loyal to him. He does not need to hit you anymore. He hits you through their rejection. And every time you stay quiet trying to be the bigger person, he wins more of them.

THE TELL

How you know this is not just 'kids being kids'

If you've ever had to keep a secret list of what your child repeated after time with him because you knew no one would believe it, that is not paranoia. That is your survival instinct documenting abuse by proxy.

- Your child suddenly uses words they have never used before: 'narcissist', 'abusive', 'toxic' - words he uses about you.
- They refuse gifts or cards from you and say 'Dad said we don't need anything from you.'
- They repeat exact phrases about court, money, or your past that only he could have said.
- They tell you they are 'protecting their peace' or 'setting boundaries' - language he feeds them.
- Contact drops the second they spend time with him and returns only when he needs something.
- They accuse you of things that happened only in his version of events.
- They call you by your first name or 'my dad's wife' instead of Mom.

THE TELL

If your child has started to sound like your ex when they talk about you, this is not coincidence. This is him speaking through them.

THE LIES HE PLANTS

The exact words mothers hear from their own children

These are not made up. These come from real mothers who have lost time, lost trust, and sometimes lost their kids for years. Tick every one you have heard. He is not 'venting.' He is poisoning the well.

- "Dad said you hit him and that's why we can't see you."
- "You don't love us. Dad said you left because you found someone else."
- "Dad said you're dangerous and we shouldn't be alone with you."
- "I don't want to come. Dad said you'll just make me sad."
- "Dad said you don't pay for anything and we have to live like this because of you."
- "Grandma said you were never a good mom anyway."
- "Dad said if I love you it means I don't love him."
- "You lied to the judge. Dad showed us the papers."
- "Dad said you only want us for the child support."
- "You abandoned us. Dad said you chose your new life."
- "Dad said we don't have to listen to you anymore."
- "Mommy is crazy. Dad said that's why we can't live with her."
- "Dad said you hit him with the car."
- "You never wanted us. Dad said that's why you left."

THE PATTERN

He does not need to be right. He only needs them to believe you are wrong. The more they repeat his words as their own, the more he has erased you.

SAY THIS

When they come at you with his poison

Soft words teach them the lies work. These are clear. Say them once. Then stop explaining. The more you defend, the more they see you as the problem.

SAY THIS

When they say 'Dad said you don't love us': "I love you. Your father is lying to you to hurt me. I will not argue with you about his lies. When you want the truth from me, not from him, I am here."

SAY THIS

When they refuse to come: "I will not force you while he is feeding you stories. I love you. The door is open when you are ready to hear my side instead of his."

SAY THIS

When they repeat a lie about money or court: "Those are things your father told you. They are not true. I will not discuss his lies with you. Ask me about something real."

SAY THIS

When he uses them to deliver guilt: "Tell your father to text me himself. I do not take messages through my children."

SAY THIS

When they say they hate you: "I know that feels real right now. He has worked hard to make you feel it. I still love you. That does not change."

SAY THIS

When they call you by your first name or 'my dad's wife': "I am your mother. Not his wife. Not the woman he married after me. I am the one who carried you."

BUILD THE RECORD

Make it impossible for him to lie about the lies

He counts on you being too wrecked to document. Stop reacting in the record. Be boring. Be specific. Be relentless.

- Every time the kids repeat a lie, write the exact words, the date, what they said right before and after. No feelings. Just facts.
- Screenshot every message where he uses the kids as messengers or changes the schedule to punish you. Folder named 'Weaponization.'
- If he withholds time, send one calm message: 'I am available for my court-ordered parenting time. Please confirm.' Screenshot everything.
- Tell one safe adult outside his circle what is happening. Get it in writing that they have seen the change in the kids.
- Keep a private list of every holiday, birthday, school event, and medical appointment he blocked or poisoned. Judges notice patterns.
- If they accuse you of something false, write the exact accusation and the date it was said. Do not argue with the child. Document.

THE RULE

If it is not written down, it did not happen in court. If your child said it after time with him, it goes in the record. No exceptions.

WHEN THEY REJECT YOU

The specific hell of your own child looking at you like the e

It is not just missing them. It is watching the child who once ran to you now turn their face away because he has made you the monster in their story. It is hearing your own child use the exact cold tone he uses when he wants to punish you.

You will want to collapse in the parking lot after they leave. You will want to text him every ugly thing you have held back. Do not. That is exactly what he is waiting for. Every reaction gives him another story to tell them about how 'unstable' you are.

- The child who just looked at you like you are dangerous is still the baby you stayed up with all night. He is trying to make you forget that person exists.
- Your job right now is not to make them love you again today. Your job is to stay the steady one they can return to when the lies stop working.
- He is betting they will never question him. Your refusal to disappear is the evidence they will eventually need.
- You are allowed to grieve the motherhood he stole. You are not allowed to let him steal the version of you that is still here.

PROTECT THE THREAD

Small, quiet moves that keep a piece of you in their lives

Big gestures give him ammunition. Small, consistent ones give them a different story of you that he cannot fully erase.

- One short, boring text a week through the parenting app only. No emotion. 'Thinking of you. Love you.' Screenshot it. He can show them or not.
- Leave one small thing they actually like at the exchange. No note. No card that can be twisted or thrown away in front of them.
- When you do have time with them, do not spend every minute defending yourself. Make one normal memory. Breakfast. A drive. A dumb joke. He cannot rewrite that as easily.
- Keep every drawing, photo, and card they ever gave you. When they are older and the fog lifts, those will matter more than his stories.
- If they are old enough for a letter they can read later: 'I know it feels confusing right now. I am still here. I love you. No matter what he tells you.'

THE RULE

Every time you refuse to turn a visit into a courtroom, you give them one more reason to doubt the story he is selling about you.

THE LONG GAME

Why it feels hopeless and why you keep showing up anyway

He is counting on you giving up. On the silence and the rejection eventually breaking you so you stop fighting for time. That is when he has won for good.

The children he is turning against you are still children. One day the lies will have to compete with their own memories and the record you kept. Your only job is to still be standing when that day comes.

You are not crazy. You are not a bad mother. You are a mother whose ex decided the children were the most effective way to keep destroying you. That is on him. Your job is to refuse to disappear.

TONIGHT

Write down the three worst lies your children have repeated in the last month. Date them. Save them. That is one more piece of the truth they will need when they start asking questions.

If this is escalating to false allegations, withheld time, or you fear for the children, get a lawyer who understands.

He is betting they will never question him.

Every lie he plants is a bet against your persistence. You are the one who keeps showing up with clean records, calm boundaries, and the truth they can return to. The woman he tried to erase from their story is still here. And the children will eventually need the version of you he could not destroy.

You are not the enemy they were taught. You are the mother who refused to vanish.